Dr Dee Extraction Briefing

Int. Military tent.
3 Special Forces operatives (Tom, Dick and Harry) stand around a table, silently observing a map of a scientific facility.
Their commander enters the tent, prompting each to snap to attention.

COMMANDER LUCIA
At ease

The three relax.

LUCIA
This one's going to be easier than last time; a covert intrusion and extraction.

HARRY
What are we stealing, then?

LUCIA
Who.

Lucia sets a dossier on the table in front of the three. There is no picture attached, and the only words on the cover are 'Doctor Dee'. Tom is the first to pick it up.

LUCIA
Doctor Dee, one of the researchers on the Scot's 'Damocles' project and, our sources claim, the head researcher on the Hidern experiment that cost us the war.

Dick and Harry both look up in surprise. Tom looks up too, but it is clear that this information doesn't affect him.

TOM
No Picture?

LUCIA
Unfortunately, no. The Scots have set up a system that allows the scientists to change their face while at the facility. It's meant to prevent defections from having too great an effect on projects, since nobody can be identified by their coworkers when outside.

TOM
Then I suppose that 'Doctor Dee' is a pseudonym?

LUCIA
Possibly. The only other name our informant has given for him is 'John Dark', which could go either way.

DICK
So he's got false names out the arse and his face changes every day. How the hell are we meant to ID him before someone notices us? Wait for him to sit at his assigned desk?

HARRY
That's one way, we could also keep an eye out for someone with both smokes and an inhaler.

Harry passes the Dossier to Dick to read.

DICK
Someone isn't a fan of lungs.

Tom flinches at this, but mostly keeps his composure

TOM (without looking up)
And you think that condemning a third of the world's population to death by poisoned gas is going to leave you in a sound state of mind?

LUCIA
Either way, short of interviewing each scientist, that's your best option for finding him.

HARRY
How do you suggest we get in? I'm only seeing one quiet entrance, but we'll probably need ID to get past the guards. Unless you have a way of taking them out that won't be noticed the moment someone else walks by

LUCIA
That's where our insider comes in handy once more, he's managed to procure us blank ID to get you in without any problem.

DICK
So he's high enough in the pecking order to be able to get us ID, but can't get a picture of our target. How's that make sense?

TOM
Anyone can sneak into the manager's office and swipe a few bits of plastic. No matter if it's the project lead giving us this or one of the cleaners, there's enough plausible deniability in it that anyone on the project is safe from any accusations of espionage. The worst that can happen is that someone gets a slap on the wrist and the office is under suspicion for a while. Anything more sensitive getting out risks our informant being found out; worse, those not involved being persecuted.

HARRY
So we walk in, disguise ourselves the same way the scientists do, find Dee, and walk out? Want us to gather any intel on Damocles as well?

LUCIA
If you can get any out, go ahead but that's not important. Dee should be able to help us in that department. We'll have transport waiting for you when you get him out. I'd suggest you pack light, just in case things go awry.

Fade to black, scene end.